Upland to vote on paramedics program, fee

The Upland City Council Monday night unanimously approved an April ballot measure asking voters to establish a public paramedic

The municipal election ballot measure calls for a monthly fee of $1.50 per residential, commercial and industrial unit in the city, to show as a $3 charge on the bimonthly water bill.

If the measure is passed by twothirds of the voters, the current paramedical service offered by the city's fire department would be upgraded to better handle heart attacks, shock victims and other cases where life is in danger.

The approval marked a victory for Paramedics Upland Fire Fighters (PUFF), the citizens' group which has struggled two years to establish a public paramedic service.

I am, of course, very, very pleased," said Joe Piscioneri, cochairman of the group.

Piscioneri, an Upland resident, had double reason to celebrate the outcome of the meeting. In addition to approving the paramedic resolution, the council also chose to write the ballot argument in favor of the measure, and invited PUFF representatives to be co-sponsors.

The argument will be published in the voter's handbook before the election. Authorship of the argument against the measure is open to any interested parties.

Councilman John McCarthy requested one minor change in the wording of the resolution. He had received a call from a constituent concerned that the phrase saying fee limits "will be" adjusted annually was threatening to those on a fixed income. McCarthy asked if the wording could be changed to "may and the resolution was passed with that correction.

The vote on the resolution was 4-0. Councilman Frank Hoover was

The new service would be staffed by nine paramedics, including six new employees and three current staff members who would be trained. They would be augmented by a full-time coordinator and parttime clerical help.

The fee, originally set at $2.10 per month, was lowered by removing initial capital investment costs. The city is considering covering this expense, estimated at $146,000 for equipment and remodeling in the first year, from a $750,000 contingency fund.

Fire Chief Don Justis reminded council members that the program is a basic life support program in the field, and does not include transportation. As a result it would not infringe on any of the local ambulance services.

However, paramedics will, if necessary, ride with the victim to the hospital if the ambulance attendents need assistance

He said the community needs both public and private paramedics in order to receive even a reasonable level of service. Adding that the number of emergency calls has been three times that of fire calls, Justis said the number of rescues has grown from less than 400 in 1975 to more than 1,000 for the past year.

By having a paramedic unit within the fire department, he said he will better be able to control the quality of the service "setting our own standards. He said augmenting private services can guarantee faster response time.

State budget includes rail service

New commuter rail service between Upland and Los Angeles and remodeling of the sewer plant at the California Institution for Men at Chino are included in Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr's proposed 1980-81 state

The rail service between Los Angeles and the San Bernardino and Riverside area represents Brown's proposed 400 percent increase in state financing of public transporta-tion. This includes a major expansion of passenger train service throughout California.

The governor called for upping the state money available for public transportation from $46 million to $192 million, with $37 million set aside for additional rail service.

"Efficient and effective public transit services ... can ease the impact gas shortages have on local and intercity mobility, reduce energy consumption over the long term, mitigate air pollution and aid in relieving congestion on our streets and highways by providing an attractive alternative to the automobile," said Brown in his budget message.

The program also calls for initiation of commuter rail service between Los Angeles and Oxnard and Los Angeles and Orange County. Service between San Diego and Los Angeles will be increased and service will be extended to Santa Barbara on that route.

By DON GREEN Staff Writer

Six Upland ministers are taking their faith and counseling to the streets in police patrol cars.

Although the Upland Police Department Chaplain Corps officialbegan earlier this month, the ministers have been riding with policemen since September.

Steve Harris of Community Foursquare Church noted he assisted in three potential suicide cases during his first six times out, including once when he was called by police.

He recalled an instance when a man would not let the police into a room, but allowed Harris to enter and talk.

Tom Patterson of Christ New Life Ministries said he had a calming effect on a woman who was involved in a heated dispute with her husband and "really hysterical."

He conceded that the ministers may not always be able to help, but he and the other chaplains emphasized their availability when

Capt. Gary Hart called the chaplains a new "resource" for the department

He said their services will be used particularly in "crisis situations," such as family disputes, possible suicides, deaths in the family, alcohol abuse and runaway

Beyond those examples, Hart said the chaplains would help in "any situation requiring spiritual guidance.

The chaplains each intend to ride in patrol cars, during a variety of shifts, eight to 15 hours a month, said Don Buchanan of First Baptist Church of San Antonio Heights.

Hart noted the other important part of the chaplain corps is that the six ministers will be available during times when they are not on patrol. Police officers will act as "referral agents" for the ministers,

Hart said Police Chief Coy Estes has long been interested in starting a chaplains' program and that the chief called on Buchanan to help get the service under way

Buchanan stressed, "We're there to be used if they want us, but we're not being forced on them."

He added that he hopes the corps will be a "bridge" between police and the community. Part of the program's aim is to make the clergymen more accessible, the chaplains said.

Bill Findley of Upland and the Neighborhood Church of and Missionary Alliance in Ontario, Bob Erickson of Life Bible Fellowship and Don Peterman of First Church of the Nazarene are the other three chaplains volunteering their time.

The chaplains wear name badges and will soon carry cards giving their church phone numbers for future counseling.

He added that the ministers will stay with officers on patrol rather than remaining behind on their own once a crisis has cooled. Further counseling can be arranged by phone, he said.

Hart said the clergymen are well versed in family counseling. He also chaplains have the opportunity to follow up on domestic and personal problems they encounter.

Buchanan emphasized, "We're not playing policemen — we're only chaplains," and the ministers said they were not out to push their own

Both Ontario and Fontana have tried similar programs.

Police Chief Lee Kolbrek said ministers rode with Ontario officers several years ago, but the department found too few situations for their services. He called the 'average family disturbance too heated at the time" for clergymen to accomplish much.

However, he termed the program a "good idea" and noted the department continues to make referrals to ministers

Lt. Ben Abernathy of the Fontana Police Department said ministers have been riding with officers for about two years.

Plan to build racquetball center in park shelved due to inflation manager for Santa Barbara.

Unique plans by a private firm to build a racquetball center at an Upland public park have fallen victim to rising construction costs and interest rates.

In a letter to the city last month, Rick Beguelin, co-owner of BKB Partners in Ventura, said, "We have had some intensive meetings and financial analyses ... and regret that we must shelve for the time being our efforts to build a public racquetball-health center in your Beguelin held out hope that the project - which has been in the works for more than a year and in 1978 was estimated to cost between $600,000 and $800,000 - could be revived in the future.

Mike Matlock, Upland's assistant city manager for public services, said no agreement had been reached between the city and BKB Partners, but rough terms had been developed.

He said the city was looking at a 50-year lease of land at Greenbelt Park, on the east side of Benson Avenue between 13th and 15th streets. After that period, Upland would have owned the facility.

Upland would have received $2,500 or 2 percent of gross receipts annually, whichever figure was higher, under the terms being discussed, Matlock said. He had no figures on projected BKB Partners would have maintained the center, he continued, and the city would have paid for everything outside the walls of the building. Matlock estimated the maximum city investment in landscaping and the 50-stall parking lot at $75,000.

Beguelin had said the popularity of racquetball combined with cities' reduced ability to develop and maintain parks after Proposition 13 prompted many inquiries about leasing arrangements with the firm.

BKB Partners has built and operated facilities on city-owned land in Ventura and Bakersfield and started two others in San Luis Obispo and Lompoc.

Matlock said the city staff is reviewing alternatives for park development to replace the indoor, public racquetball courts. Those proposals will be presented to the recreation committee and eventually the city council, he

Greenbelt Park, only partially developed, has undergone several changes since the original master plan for the 22 acres. Faced with ongoing concerns over park development and maintenance costs, Matlock noted the city is currently exploring a proposal for using private funds to build tennis courts at Cabrillo Park, adjacent to youth soccer fields on the north side of 11th Street west of Silverwood Avenue

Ted Dutton, an owner of nearby apartments, presented his ideas before the recreation committee in October. He proposed the tennis courts - Matlock said they are now talking about three — as an alternative to what he called a fiveacre "rock pile."

Upland has no tennis courts on city land. Matlock termed Dutton's proposal as still being in the "rough talking stages.

Beguelin called BKB Partners' decision to scrap, at least for now, the Greenbelt Park proposal a 'great disappointment

The past six months have seen a tremendous upsurge in the construction costs required for developing a racquetball facility, and the radical increase in interest rates added the final touches to rendering it virtually impossible for us to develop racquetball facilities at this time," he explained.

"Trying to develop one of these centers with all equity funds is not only virtually impossible, but does not allow enough profit to give the investors a reasonable return.'

Market plans draw protests by Uplanders low-density (a maximum of four units per acre) residential development, although the zoning is for agricultural use. The general plan amendment is for a neighborhood shopping center. The Great Western Rose Co. is currently located at the site in northeast Upland.

Planning Director Bill Young said that because of the "drastic departure" from the current general plan, the city has required an environment impact report be He recommended the proposal be continued until the report is presented, and the commission voted to hear the general plan amendment, actually one of three distinct sections in the amendment, again on Feb. 28. Cole, a resident of nearby Buffington Street, said, "I'm going to start off by saying I have a difficult time understanding why Upland needs another supermarket." He cited three market closings in the city, but a representative of one market he named - Ralph's, 685

City Engineer Fred Blanchard said traffic generated by the proposed center could have a "tremendous on 19th Street, where traffic volume has increased about 70 percent in two years.

Zinda opposed continuing the general plan amendment, saying he saw no need for a shopping center at the site. Commissioner Faye Bert also voted against the continuance.

In other action, the commission:

Required the Upland Development Co., a Beverly Hills firm, to show proof that recreational and other features substituted for a planned paddle tennis court, pool and spa at a condominium project are at least equal

The commission required the proof before granting the requested modification of a conditional-use permit for the already occupied development on the north side of Ninth Street just east of Vallejo Way. The original features are part of the permit.

The matter will be considered Jan. 24.

Approved a conditional-use permit for a restaurant in the Mountain-Arrow Center, near the northwest corner of Mountain Avenue and Arrow Highway.

However, the commission required the restaurant entrance be located near the southeast corner of the building to minimize traffic problems, limited hours to 4:30 p.m. to midnight daily and stipulated the restaurant have no cocktail lounge.

'Deadbeats' is not a dead issue to county board of supervisors

By CARLTON SMITH Staff Writer

Nobody likes a deadbeat," opined Supervisor Robert O. Townsend Wednesday, and to that end, county supervisors were asked to consider requesting special state legislation which would enable county collecters to have access to state income tax records

According to county Health Care Services Agency collection division chief Stephen G. Sutherland, a change in state law to permit him to go into state tax records could help him recover some of about $5,300,-000 in delinquent accounts for services rendered through the health care system.

Better than 50 percent of the 29,-400 accounts owing the $5.3 million, said Sutherland, are "skips" meaning people who have left town.

Going into state income tax records, said Sutherland, would help him trace the "skippers" more quickly, and also would help him recover the money owed.

Strongly in favor of seeking the legislative change - by state law currently, all state income tax records are confidential - was

However, the four other supervisors expressed some misgivings over the idea of seeking the change, particularly after learning from Sutherland that the county's collection group is currently tied into a national credit computer.

By linking the income tax information to the national credit computer, said some supervisors, an invasion of tax privacy might occur. 'This is the kind of thing we really ought to have a unanimous vote on, said Supervisor James Mayfield, who said he opposed the request for the new legislation.

'And since it looks like you've got at least two other defectors, I think we should just put this aside for the time being," Mayfield concluded.

No sooner had the issue been shunted aside by the board's consensus than the board learned, to its chagrin, that the county itself was something of a deadbeat.

Mayfield said he had been informed by county auditor-controller Errol J. Mackzum that the county hospital was getting too far behind in its payments to vendors who sell the hospital its supplies.

The problem, Mayfield said Mackzum informed him, was that the hospital itself was not processing its paperwork in a timely fashion. As a result, some businesses are now refusing to sell the medical center anything unless the county brings cash.

"That's disgraceful," said Supervisor Dennis Hansberger, who then moved that the auditor-controller be instructed to make whatever temporary transfers are necessary to bring the hospital's debts up to date.

Mayfield said he'd already issued that order, so that there was no reason to vote on it. Mackzum said he'd been doing it anyway, but warned the supervisors that a better accounts payable system needed to be installed in the hospital to avoid a continuing problem.

Townsend then said that he felt the whole issue was ironic. coming as it did after the discussion about people owing the county, most of them from services provided at the medical center.

The county is considering a proposal to merge the medical center with a private hospital for greater efficiency.

Action against county coroner delayed The unrest between county Coroner Bill Hill and his deputies was put on hold for 30 days Thursday after an attorney for the deputies admitted that court action against Hill was premature. Superior Court Judge Don Turner, who had been asked to approve a preliminary injunction forbidding Hill to assign the deputies the task of transporting murder victims to a central morgue, agreed to hold off action on the injunction until the deputies attempt to resolve the dispute administratively. The dispute began several weeks ago after Hill unveiled plans to conduct all homicide autopsies in a central morgue at Patton State Hospital Hill's move was in response to criticism of his department over the handling of several autopsies lately.

Hill's plan was to improve the quality control aspect of the autopsies - important for legal reasons - by having all homicide victims or suspected homicide victims transported to Patton for a more controlled autopsy. But Hill's six deputy coroners refused to go along with the plan, contending that the task of physically transporting the bodies to Patton was a new working condition. They sought the injunction against Hill to

Turner, in agreeing to postpone action on the case for the next 30 days, said that he legally could not become involved in the dispute until the other avenues had

Wellness volunteers needed

If you were given intensive education and training in wellness, would you experience improved health, less disabling disease and spend less money for health care during your lifetime?

With the aid of a grant from Bank of America, Casa Colina Hospital in Pomona has opened a Wellness Education Research Project, which seeks to discover the answers to this question. According to Laban Strite, M.A., who developed and is directing the program, 500 volunteers will participate in the project, which is based on a holistic concept of body, mind, and spirit. Interested adults are invited to apply.

Participation in the project is free of charge. Those who volunteer are required to have two health profiles, six months or more apart, and to participate in a 30hour Wellness Education course. Profile reports will be given each participant. Strite emphasizes that the success of the project depends on sincere commitment and a willingness to complete the entire program.

Bonnie Warner

Olympic torch bearer is in countdov

Bonnie Warner is in the countdown - only 20 more days until she runs with the Olympic flame to Lake

The young Mt. Baldy woman was selected in April of 1978 as one of 52 runners to carry the Olympic torch from Yorktown, Va., to the site of the 1980 Olympic Winter

'Am I excited?" she said in an interview during her Christmas vacation from Stanford University. "I've been excited since the day I applied in October of 1978." Bonnie is a freshman at Stanford and plans to major in environmental engineering. In order to take a month off to be a torch bearer, she will carry 20 units in the spring quarter. She also works in the topographic department of the U.S. Geological Survey Department. To keep in shape for the historic torch running event, Bonnie runs 7 to 9 miles a day, seven days a week. The Olympic flame will be flown from Olympia, Greece, in a miner's lamp to Langley Air Force Base. It will be then transferred to a naval surface craft for the 21-mile sail up the York River to Yorktown Post Office Dock. This trip is to symbolize the arrival by sea of

On Jan. 31 at 9:30 a.m., the Olympic Torch Relay begins. Taking turns, the 52 torch bearers will carry the flame to Philadelphia, New York City and on to Albany, N.Y. Here the 52 runners will split up.

One group will follow the Hudson River to Ticonderoga and into Lake Placid, while the other group will go through the Adirondack Mountains into Lake Placid.

There are 26 men and 26 women from the 50 states, District of Columbia and Lake Placid in the run. Ages range from 15 to 57. Running will be a doctor, minister, laywer, former Olympic bobsledder, two miliary officers. West Point cadet, four high school students, college instructor, high school teacher, banker, lobsterman, seven college students, three law students, four housewives, a plumber, several corporate executives, television reporter, theater technician and an automobile factory worker.

Bonnie Warner talks about her fellow runners with glowing appreciation over their friendship. After she first met the group while on an orientation program in the summer of 1978, she said, "We're just great together. It's a wonderful group and we're powerful together."

In order to be a torch bearer, Bonnie had to pay her own transportation to the East Coast for the orientation. She also was required to pay her food and lodging expenses at that time. For the trip east to take part in the run, she will again pay for her flight to Washington, D.C., and back home, but her food and lodging will be paid for by the Olympic committee.

Bonnie worked at a hamburger stand last summer to save money for her trip. Area citizens also have supnorted her

A 10-kilometer run, potluck and fund raiser were held for the runner in Mt. Baldy, the Mt. Baldy Village held a volleyball marathon and an appeal through a letter to the editor in The Daily Report have reaped "just about enough to cover everything."

Bonn'e had planned to do a "run" the length of California during Christmas vacation to spread the word about the Olympics. When the Olympic Organizing Committee learned of her plan, she was asked to call it off.

"I don't think they believed I would do it," she said. "But they asked me not to go on the run because I shouldn't risk hurting myself. I'm doing it in June right after school is out.

"I want to tell everyone what the Olympics are and stand for. I want them to know there's more to the Olympics than television," she said.

In anticipation of being at the 1980 Winter Olympics, Bonnie said she is chiefly looking forward to the opening ceremony. The 52 torch bearers will take a major part in the rite. One will be selected to light the Lake Placid Olympic torch from the flame they will have carried from Yorktown.

With her blue eyes sparking, Bonnie Warner said she has something else she is anticipating with excitement. "I have a dancing date in the Olympic Village with a lifeguard of the Olympic pool."

Study explores pregnancies of diabetics

By JACK WILLIAMS

Copley News Service
SAN DIEGO — Pat Richards was pregnant with fear. "I had lost one baby before, eight years ago," she said. 'I was afraid of getting pregnant again, and, when it happened, it took a long time to adjust. It was a shock. I was really scared.'

Richards, a 26-year-old suburban Escondido housewife, is a diabetic.

Diabetic pregnancies are high risk. They are costly. They require additional medical care.

"Pregnancy complicated by diabetes is one of the most serious problems we face in reproductive medicine," said Dr. Dorothy R. Hollingsworth of the General Clinic

Research Center at University Hospital here. Richards, well aware of the risks, volunteered to be monitored in a study conducted by the University of California at San Diego School of Medicine. The study is designed to improve the control of diabetes during

The premature labor and hemorrhaging she had experienced during her first pregnancy — conditions thought to be linked to diabetes - were avoided this

Richards gave birth to a healthy, 8-pound, 4-ounce daughter, whom she named Renaissance Rhiannon

Whether the diet played a definitive role in Richards' trouble-free pregnancy and the subsequent birth has yet to be determined. But Richards suspects it did.

The research involved in the pregnancy diet study at UCSD is typical of research projects going on across the country in an effort to ease the medical problems for

As for Richards, she now is talking of having another child in two years. She hasn't had an injection of insulin since the birth, and she is optimistic that the diabetes may be receding. Her fears are gone.

'Everything is normal for the first time in years,' she said the other day at her home in an Escondido mobile

"I've lost 40 pounds since giving birth, and I like the high-carbohydrate, high-fiber diet so much that I'm going to continue to follow it." Prior to the UCSD study, the American Diabetes Association-approved diet - with an emphasis on low carbohydrate intake - was recommended for pregnant diabetics.

Ten out of the 15 women in the UCSD study continued to follow the low-carbohydrate diet without complications.

"It may take a long-term study of 10 to 15 years to determine which one is better," said Hollingsworth.

"The important thing for every pregnant diabetic to realize is that she requires special management by a physician with some familiarity with diabetes, and the physician with some familiarity with diabetes, and she should see a physician before getting pregnant.

"It is important that she not be taking medication, and that she approach a normal weight and be in good physical condition before the pregnancy.

"The first eight weeks are crucial. If the mother is on any drugs the damage is done in that period, when the baby's organs are formed.' Richards had been told by her doctor after losing her first child at birth that she should never get pregnant

Her recent pregnancy, she said, was not planned. "The last time," she recalled, "it cost us $5,000 and took us years to pay off."

This time the cost was $6,000 despite the fact Medi-Cal covered the Caesarean section. Certain tests required by the study were financed by a grant to the UCSD School of Medicine by the National Institutes of Health.

"We were better off financially now than eight years ago," said Richards, whose husband, Harlan, is a termite inspector. "It was pretty rough the last time. I didn't receive the care I needed."

Pharmacy costs and three shots of insulin daily escalated the doctor bills.

"Even a normal woman's body makes 30 percent more insulin when she is pregnant," said Hollingsworth. "The placenta makes a tremendous number of hormones that are antagonistic to the action of insulin, and the doses during pregnancy must be greatly increased."

The research Hollingsworth and her associates are conducting at UCSD is designed to uncover possible methods for the control of excessive fluctuations in blood

Richards' blood sugar was carefully controlled, she said, by a diet that found her eating bran muffins four times daily. She also ate fresh fruits and drank natural fruit juices. Her meat intake was minimal

The diet includes 20 to 30 grams of crude fiber daily Sixty percent of it is carbohydrates, 15 to 20 percent fat and 20 percent protein.

State's long-held image as anti-business fading

By CHARLES W. ROSS Copley News Service

California in recent months has taken several giant steps toward erasing its long - held image as an anti - business state. And business executives in the rest of the nation and abroad are expressing more than casual interest.

What they see is a state long considered only in terms of its excellent sales potential that now just might be favorably considered as a good place to build a factory, set up a large - scale distributorship or erect a corporate headquarters.

California has reduced property taxes on business and put a lid on inflation - first to come in a new wave of pro - business sentiment all over the country," a New York analyst said. The pendulum is swinging the other way, but just

But, generally speaking, the business climate has improved tremendously," said a spokesman for the California Manufacturers Association.

The beneficial effects Jan. 1. most obvious to economists about by the freeing of capital and the better industrial atmosphere as a aspect of Proposition 13 as it has been implemented.

The state did not eliminate the tax without extracting a price, however. The Legislature boosted taxes in two other areas to more than offset the $240 million annual loss of revenue.

"Even though they will pay a higher tax, the banks and corporations felt the trade-off was beneficial," said Jim Kennedy, of the state Chamber of Commerce. "Banks and other financial institutions came off rather well because of some revisions in the in-lieu method of paying their taxes. The large corporations thought they would ultimately benefit more because of the better business climate.'

Nutrition experts disagree on diets disagree on diet theories, but they generally agree on the need for a good breakfast. The usual recommendation is that about one-third of the day's calories be eaten at the first meal of the day. Since the period between last night's dinner and this morning's breakfast is a relatively long one, their advice again in a very short time. makes good sense.

Chinese cooking takes minutes

HONG KONG - A reledge had placed on the fascinating pot that is that country's cuisine.

I came away with added appreciation for the interest in Chinese cuisine and cooking methods. Research while in China, limited as it was, convinced me that preparation entails the most work. Cooking usually takes but a few minutes. It is dicing, peeling, chopping, skinning and mixing that take time. Steamed Fish

1 snapper (about 2 pounds)

2 scallions 3 medium-size black mushrooms

6 slices ham 5 slices ginger

1/2 oz. chicken fat

Sauce 1 cup stock

1 tsp. light soy sauce 1 tsp. white wine

1 tsp. cornstarch

1 tsp. salt

2 tsps. peanut oil Clean fish well and dry carefully. Lay two scallions on platter. Place fish on top, scatter mushroom slices, ham and ginger on fish, then cover with chicken fat. Steam over high heat for seven to 10 minutes, depending on size of fish. Drain and discard any remaining chicken fat. Heat two teaspoons of peanut oil. Add pre-mised sauce, cooked until thicken-

Meat vs. energy

How would using less meat affect use of energy? Using less meat would mean using more direct food crop products. The current diet of people in the United States contains large quantitites of indirect food crop products - not only meat from grain-fed animals but highly refined foods and processed foods. These are not only expensive but producing them requires more energy and natural resources than the production of crops. Direct food crops, it is argued, thus: 1. use less energy; 2. best utilizes natural resources; 3. are lower in cost to the stir-fry at high heat and consumer; and 4. have a high nutritive value.

Remember goodness of old-fashioned oats

By MARJORIE RICE Copley News Service

Our national appetite for white flours has caused us to miss out on some good things. Even when grains are enriched, the entire spectrum of nutrients in the germ and bran aren't put

That's why even enriched white flour is criticized by some nutritionists as lulling people into a false sense of nutritional security.

Here's what's in a whole

Germ: Grain is the seed from which a new plant would grow. The germ contains the embryo plant, and is a source of vitamins, minerals and protein. It's also a source of oil, so germ, and flours and cereals containing it, have a shorter shelf life than items

Endosperm: This is the storehouse of protein and carbohydrate designed to feed the growing plant in its earliest stages. This is what is milled into processed flour.

Bran: This is the outer covering of the grain, which protects it from damage. It's also an excellent natural source of fiber.

While the grains are becoming more popular, showing up in more breads, snacks and cereals, there's one form of whole grains that's been around for decades.

It's oats. All those bowls oatmeal and those oatmeal cookies were offering a nutrition bonus of seven B vitamins, vitamin E, iron, calcium magnesium, sodium, potassium, phosphorus, copper, manganese, zinc, fiber, and protein - and that was just in the oats. Add milk on the cereal or raisins in the cookies and it adds up to more.

So here are some ways to use an old standby, with a new health food status.

Casserole 1 can (10.75 ozs.) condensed cream of chicken 2/3 cup milk 2 tbsps. grated Parmesan

2 tbsps. instant minced

onion 1/4 tsp. garlic powder

1/8 tsp. pepper 2 cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey 2 cups zucchini slices 1 can (4 ozs.) mushroom slices, drained

Crunch Topping: 1 1/3 cups oats, quick or old-fashioned, uncooked 1/3 cup grated Parmesan

1/3 cup butter, melted ½ tsp. oregano

½ tsp. thyme 1/8 tsp. garlic powder

For the casserole, combine the soup, milk cheese, onion and seasonings in a three-quart saucepan and mix them well.

Bring the mixture to a boil over medium heat. Stir in the remaining casserole ingredients and spoon the mixture into an 11x7-inch baking dish.

For the topping, combine all the ingredients, mixing them well. Sprinkle them evenly over the casserole.

Bake the casserole in a preheated 375-degree oven or about 25 minutes, or until the topping is golden brown. Makes six servings.

Note: For savory herb Add-A-Crunch to coat chicken, or to sprinkle on salads, soups and casseroles, combine the Crunch Topping ingredients in a large shallow baking pan, mixing them well. Bake in a preheated 350degree oven for 15 to 18 minutes, or until the topping is golden brown.

Cool the topping and store it refrigerated in a tightly covered container. Makes about 1.75 cups.

Husband and wife team appear in comedy 'Luv'

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer
Annette and David Roon will production of "Luv" which opens

Friday with an 8 p.m. curtain.

Malcolm Atterbury, artistic director of the Actors Repertory Theater, said the comedy, "Luv," will replace the previously scheduled

David and Annette Roon are seen in a racy sequence of the comedy, "Luv," which opens Friday at the Claremont Playhouse. Also featured in the play is C. Mack Gilliland. Curtain time is 8 p.m. "Luv" will run weekends through Feb. 9. (Staff photo by Tom Tondee)

"Same Time, Next Year" due to the "sudden unavailability" of the rights for the play.

"Luv" is a satirical look at the marriage of Milt and Ellen Manville, played by the Roons. Milt meets his old college chum, Harry Berlin, who is about to jump off a bridge.

Berlin's problem is, "I'm more in love today than the day I married, but my wife won't give me a divorce." Through some switching of roles, Berlin ends up married to Milt's wife — and still miserable.

David and Annette Roon have been active in community theater for many years. They have acted and directed productions with the Valley Community Theater in Pomona and now Roon is theater manager at Claremont.

Mrs. Roon was last seen in the hilarious comedy, "Lovers and Other Strangers" and last season played the nurse in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." She has played Blanche in "Streetcar Named Desire" at VCT, which she says is her favorite role, and directed "Butterflies Are Free" at Claremont.

Roon prefers to act, but actually does more directing since he says, "Directors are hard to find." At Claremont, he has directed "You Can't Take It With You" and "The Owl and the Pussycat."

C. Mack Gilliland will play Berlin. He has been associated for many years with VCT having been board member, board president, actor and director. He also has appeared at the Gallery Theater in Ontario in an acting role.

Reservations for "Luv" may be made by calling 621-5005.

Parley to discuss good-evil conflict

A conference of religious philosophers will address a classic problem this month at Claremont Graduate School: good vs. evil.

The conference Jan. 18 and 19, titled "New Directions in Philosophy of Religion," will be a sort of inaugural for John Hick, who is joining the CGS faculty as the Danforth Professor of Religion. Hick is considered Great Britain's foremost religious philosopher. He will teach the second semester of each academic year in Claremont and the first at the University of Birmingham in England.

Many of the delegates to the January conference have written papers over the years on the ancient paradox: If God be good, why is there evil in the world? On the first night of the conference five of them will discuss with each other and with the audience their latest ideas on the

Those taking part in the panel discussion, "Evil: New Light on an Old Problem," are David R. Griffin, professor of philosophy of religion, School of Theology at Claremont; Nelson Pike, chairman of the philosophy department at the University of California at Irvine; Alvin Plantinga, professor of philosophy at Calvin College in Grand Rapids; John K. Roth, the Frederick I. Richman Professor of Philosophy at Claremont Men's College; and Frederick Sontag, the Robert C. Denison Professor of Philosophy at Pomona College. Stephen T. Davis, associate professor of philosophy and religion at CMC, will preside.

At the final session the night of Jan. 19 Hick will deliver a paper, "A Philosophy of Religious Pluralism." Hick's theme is that the religions of the world are various responses to the transcendental reality that all religions agree exists. Hick, a Christian theologian, will be answered in a paper prepared by a Japanese Zen Buddhist, Masao Abe Hick's paper will be the only one read at the conference. Six other scholars have prepared papers which are being circulated among the delegates in advance. A formal response to each will be read at the conference. after which there will be a brief statement by the author and general discussion.

Information concerning the guild's 13th annual fashion show, scheduled March 22 at Industry Hills Convention Center, will be presented. Table reservations for the event may be made at the meeting on a "first come"

Food Coop sale set

Senior citizens may purchase produce at wholesale prices on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month through the San Dimas Mini-Mart Food Coop at Stanley Plummer Community Building, 245 E. Bonita Ave., from 12:45 to 2:45 p.m.

Nearly 100 seniors were served at the first Coop sale in December. However, a large number of people were turned away as all food was sold during the first 45 minutes of operation. More food will be available and changes made to ensure smooth operation of the program at the next Tuesday's sale, reported Pat Gore, administrator of the new program.

Dallas.

Each day has 86,400 seconds to use wisely

Montclair Ministerial Association A brand new year! What will it hold? What will happen to us? Let us think of the new year this way.

Suppose your bank credited your account each morning with $86,400 that carried over no balance from day to day, allowed you to keep no cash on account, and every evening cancelled whatever part of the sum you failed to use during the day. What would be your course of action? Most likely - "to draw out every cent!"

Did you know that every one of us does have such a special account? The name of that account is -TIME"! Every morning we are credited anew with 86,-400 seconds. Every night whatever we failed to invest in good purposes is marked off as lost. We are allowed no overdrafts - we cannot borrow from tomorrow.

The important fact is that no none has any more time per day than another, nor does anyone have less. Presidents, kings, and rich men all have the same deposit of time as pensioners, laborers and the poor.

For many the "thief of time" is procrastination - putting off what ought to be done. Often we fail to use wisely the precious time allowed us to develop our own lives as well as to "work the work our hands have been given to Another thing about "time" is that "yesterday" is a cancelled check, "tomorrow" is a promissary note and "today" is the only cash we have or can depend upon! "If I only had more time!" But we all have all the time there is. The problem is not with time, but with me - with not using the time available to me wisely. There is one more aspect of time to be considered, it is called "eternity." The decisions and commitments we make with respect to God in time will affect our eternity. Scripture reminds us, "Today is the day of salvation." Do not say "tomorrow we will do this or that," for we do not know what a day will allow us or bring forth. The same God who created time and eternity, created all the necessary resources available to live in both places and in a way that is well pleasing to Him. It is up to us to choose to put them into action - or, lose them.

Have a good day - a profitable new year - and a great eternity!

our award - winning films, not ely seen here in the past, will be wn free on the Cal Poly Pomona ous during a film/discussion s in January and February. The s will be shown on successive day nights at 7:30 p.m. in the ter of the Cal Poly University on. The community is invited. onsored by the university's ool of Arts and the Ecumenical vices Advisory Board, the /discussion series is designed to s attention on issues of morality on basic ethical values which en confront people of any nation their day-to-day life.

After each screening a panel of olars and theologians will engage audience in a dialogue on some ne value dimensions illustrated the films and explore how erent religious philosophies view conflicts and their resolution.

The series begins on Tuesday, Jan. 29, with the Academy Award. winning Madame Rosa, starring Simone Signoret in the title role. It continues with The Servant, Feb. 5, Umberto D., Feb. 12, and The Sound of Trumpets, Feb. 19. The series opener Madame Rosa, is a loving account of an aging former prostitute living in a Pris slum who has survived the horror of Auschwitz and now helps the children of prostitutes survive by caring for them. One of these children is a young Arab boy whom he seeks to keep from being corrupted by the pimps and whores who befriend him. Madame Rosa is an affectionate look at the love between an Arab and a Jew - who know nothing of politics - each struggling to help the other survive amid squalor and misery

The Servant, Tuesday, Feb. 5, is a superbly crafted study of British upper class moral decadence. Made by the American director Joseph Losey based on a play by Harold Pinter, the film examines the course of events by which a handsome, idle, aristocratic, young man falls prey to the wiles of his resentful manservant and ultimately becomes the unwitting servant in his own corrupt house. Dirk Bogard's starring per-formance won the British Film reademy's award for Best Actor of

A little known Italian masterlece, Umberto D., by the film tist Vittorio de Sica, will be shown on Tuesday, Feb. 12. It is about an d man, a retired civil servant, who lives in a cheap furnished room with his mongrel dog, Flick. With only a meager pension to live on and a landlady who is determined to evict him so she can re-rent the room for more money, his life is further complicated by his attempt to help a young servant girl who finds herself bregnant and friendless. This classic example of Italian "neoism" at its best brings home the desperate human dimensions of life in the chaotic years following the end of World War II.

The series concludes with the prize - winning film, Il Posto (Sound of Trumpets) on Tuesday, Feb. 19. It concerns the struggles of an idealistic young man starting his first job in a gigantic Italian corporation, and traces his inevitable progress to becoming just another cog in an anonymous machine.

'Deathtrap' to play

Ira Levin's "Deathtrap" was acclaimed by the Broadway theatre critics as a smash hit comedy thriller - chiller when it premiered on February 26, 1978. The play, which is filled with "laughs and screams, fun and games," has played over 750 performances since. Tom Mallow's National Touring Company of "Deathtrap" plays Bridges Auditorium, Claremont, on Friday and Saturday, Jan. 25, 26 for two performances only.

'Deathtrap'' concerns a playwright who, after writing nothing of consequence for years, gets his hands on a play from a student that is so remarkable that he would do almost anything to get it under his own name. The twists and turns of the plot as it unfolds made the play one of the most successful on Broadway in years.

"Deathtrap" is Tom Mallow's fourth presentation of his 1979-80 American Theatre Production's season, which include "Eubie," "Chapter Two" and "Da." His national touring company of "Deathtrap" is directed by Philip Cusack. Featured performers are Donald Barton, Michael McBride, Patricia Guinan, Casper Roos, and Marion Baer. The costumes are by Ruth Morley, with lighting by Marc. B. Weiss and sets by William Ritman. James Janek is the associate producer.

'Deathtrap" is the first event in the spring Broadway Series presented by The Claremont Colleges Center for the Performing ARts. Other events include 'Bedroom Farce' starring June Lockhart, Tom Ewell, and Jill Haworth playing Feb. 7, 8, 9; Neil Simon's "Chapter Two" playing Feb. 26, 27; and the musical,

"Chicago" playing March 25, 26. Series tickets and individual. tickets are now available at Bridges Box Office, located at 4th & College Way in Claremont, between the hours of 12 noon and 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday. There are group rates for theater parties. Call (714) 621-8032 for ticket information.

Some chemicals in today's offices can trigger sneezing or headaches or actually cause mental acuity to decrease to the point where a normally bright employee becomes dull and stupid, he said.

The ability to think of sentences and write them down can also be adversely affected by chemicals that act upon certain people, Small said.

Sometimes people are viewed as having done their ob for so long that they are dull at it, but Small believes that the worker can be reacting to long-range chemical exposure that dulls ability

As an example, he cited the fact that in old offices people sat on plain, wooden chairs. They are gone now, replaced with mainly

Copier machines, for example, emit gases into the air and onto the copies they produce that can have harsh effects on people around them, Small said

Jim Brown of Upland, an employee of Lockheed Air Terminal at Ontario International Airport, below, approaches a twin-engine Cessna aircraft parked at the field and prepares to "gas 'er up." A spokesman for LAT said the company has stayed within its monthly fuel allocations and currently is in a position to meet the needs of its customers. In picture at right, a small plane makes a landing at bustling Cable Airport in Upland.

General aviation view: rosy with a big 'if' — fuel

In the field of general aviation these days — as with the automotive industry — fuel is a four-letter word.

The ability to obtain an adequate fuel supply may have a profound effect on the future of general aviation.

There's no question that general aviation — small corporate and privately owned aircraft — will grow and flourish if fuel supplies hold up.

But interviews with West End general aviation operators indicate the fuel situation could be bothersome. Right now, limits on fuel appear to be causing problems.

Publicity releases from national general aviation sources paint glowing pictures of the industry's growth.

The General Aviation Manufacturers Association (GAMA) said in an early December release that the industry's factory dollar billings through the end of November reached a 1979 total of $1.93 billion — an all-time record.

Billings in November alone, the release said, exceeded $163.9 million.

"The year-to-date total represents a gain of 18.5 percent over the same period in 1978, when the industry reported billings of $1.57 billion. November billings a year ago totaled $131.6 million and last month's (the November) figure represents a 19.7 percent increase," the release reported Edward W. Stimson, GAMA president, said in a recent New York speech that by the end of the 1980s there will be 6,000 business jets and 7,300 turboprop-powered general aviation airplanes in the U.S. skies."

All this indicates a growing demand for such aircraft. But the spectre of a fuel shortage tends to cloud an otherwise bright picture.

Paul Cable, general manager of Cable Airport in Upland, says "fuel is something of a problem compared to last year."

He explained that the base fiscal year for allocation of aviation gasoline was Oct. 1, 1977 to Sept. 30, 1978

Cable Airport received the same amount of fuel last year as it did during the base year, according to Cable. The same allocation has been made, he said, for the fiscal year. "There are more aircraft," he said, "but about the same number of flights. That means there has been more business flying and less pleasure flying."

People are buying more planes, he noted, and the cost is getting higher, ranging from $20,000 to approximately $120,000 for a single-engine plane. The cost of twinengine planes begins at about $100,000 and can exceed a million, Cable said.

"We have a plane parked on our field now that cost $750,000," he noted.

Cable said 365 planes rent space at Cable Airport

How safe is flying private planes?
"A lot safer than driving," Cable contends. "In studies made locally, aircraft figured out to be about eight times safer than a car, mile for

However, this is a point of sharp disagreement. Dan Rather, on a recent segment of the CBS television network show "60 Minutes," said general aviation flying is 10 times less safe than driving a car and 100 times less safe than flying commercial airlines. Rather did not quote the source of his figures.

Be that as it may, the ranks of private plane owners are growing and will continue to grow if fuel remains in adequate supply.

Dan Groves, manager of Chino Airport, owned and operated by San Bernardino County, said there had been an increase in flights at the airport during "the last two or three months" but that the gasoline dealer at the base had run out of 100-octane gasoline about 10 days earlier — a few days before Christmas.

"This has cut holiday flights quite a bit," Groves said.

He explained that smaller singleengine aircraft use 80— octane aviation fuel and "heavy singles and twin-engine aircraft use 100-octane gasoline.

"There's no explanation for the lack of 100 octane," Groves said. "The operator here says he's used up his allotment until Jan 1."

up his allotment until Jan 1."
"I understand Corona (airport) is out of 100 octane, too," Groves add-

Three fixed-base operators sell planes at Chino Airport — two market all kinds of planes on consignment and the third is a Cessna

Chino Airport is continuing to grow, Groves pointed out, with all buildings on the base rented.

"We have about 63 master leaseholders," said Groves, "and this number keeps going up. I'm

Four of the leaseholders operate businesses that are not related to

Because of the airport's proximity to the Chino area's heavy dairy population, three of the four serve dairy businesses.

These include:

 A milk-testing lab operated by the University of California at Riverside.

 Valley Equipment Co., which installs milking machines and equipment for dairies.

— Pleasant Feed Co., which serves dairies.

The fourth is CS&M, a firm that makes prefabricated houses and ships out the components by truck.

"The future of the airport looks good," Groves said, "except for the fuel problem. If we ever get that straightened out, we'll be fine."

Lockheed Air Terminal (LAT) accommodates the fuel needs of aircraft at Ontario International Aircraft, including the airlines, and Wells Aviation and Aerojet General, which have private planes at the aircraft.

Phil McGrath, supervisor at LATs said "at this time we have sufficient quantity of fuel to meet our demands."

"We've been staying within our allocation on a month-to-month basis. We're barely making it so this could change. But at present we're meeting the demands of all of our customers."

How does the cost of aviation fuel compare with the cost of gasoline for an automobile?

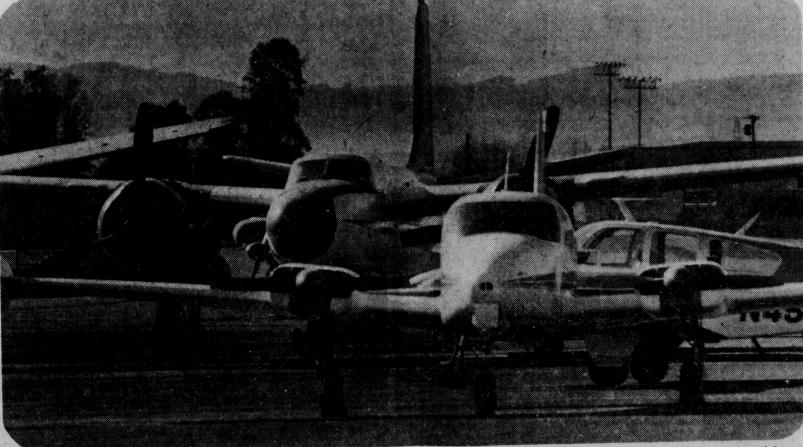

McGrath said that while unleaded as for a car costs perhaps $1.10 per gallon, 100-octane low-lead aviation fuel costs $1.29 per gallon and 80 octane goes for $1.26.

"Traditionally in Ontario," he explained, "there has been a 3-cent price differential between the two." In addition to selling fuel at the airport, LAT operates the general aviation facility on the south side of the airport.

He said the general aviation facility at the airport is used principally by "transient aircraft. People fly to Ontario in corporate and privately owned aircraft, stop to transact business and then head out," McGrath said.

A group of general aviation aircraft are parked at Chino Airport between flights. The number of flights have been up at the Chino facility in the past two or three months but in recent days there has been a shortage of 100-octane fuel for the twin-engine and larger single-engine planes.
